Laird reaffirms order to bomb N. Vietnam

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said Tuesday that U.S. air strikes are continuing "at this very moment" throughout Indochina and declared that "any area in North Vietnam is subject to attack."

Under persistent questioning in televised testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Laird described as "false" and "without foundation" reports that a policy decision had been made against the renewed bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong.

He repeated several times that U.S. air attacks are continuing "south of the DMZ (demilitarized zone), north of the DMZ and in the DMZ," and at one point said the strikes are continuing "at this very moment" throughout Indochina, including Cambodia and Laos as well as Vietnam.

In his own view, Laird said, the weekend bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong was partly to destroy supplies and partly to retaliate for what he called Hanoi's "massive invasion" of South Vietnam across the DMZ. Laird said the North Vietnamese had violated "understandings" reached in 1968 which involved a U.S.

halt to the bombing of North Vietnam if the North Vietnamese did not move across the DMZ.

He declined to say whether President Nixon's decision on the bombings had been on the basis of "tit for tat" retaliation, but said this aspect had "figured in my recommendations."

In answer to questions by Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., Laird said air strikes would continue as long as the invasion is underway and declared:

"Any area in North Vietnam is subject to attack." Laird indicated that the United States has an alternate plan of action if Vietnamization fails, but emphasized that he sees no such possibility.

He said he does not plan on the basis of possible failure, and told the committee the South Vietnamese troops have given a good accounting during the recent tough fighting.

Pressed for an estimate on when the U.S. involvement could be ended, he declined to give any dates. The committee voted 9 to 1 Monday to set a deadline of Dec. 31 for total U.S. withdrawal if all prisoners are returned.

Grayson hits firms for price violations

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Price Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson Jr. estimated Tuesday that 10 per cent of the nation's largest firms have violated price controls by making excessive profits.

He said they will be ordered to cut prices, make refunds in some cases to "identifiable" customers and—if the commission has the power to do so—pay the Treasury the amount they overcharged customers who cannot be located.

Despite the violations—some of them intentional, some inadvertent—Grayson said the price control system he directs is "on course" toward President Nixon's goal of halving the rate of inflation, bringing it down to 2.5 per cent per year by the end of 1972. "I can't say we are exactly on target or that we will achieve our goal exactly on time," Grayson told Congress' Joint Economic Committee. "But I do say we are on the right course."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the committee chairman, said the control program is "batting zero . . . appalling . . . a pathetic failure" which will become "a total farce" unless it changes direction to concentrate only on firms with near monopolistic powers.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., another critic, estimated that 40 per cent—not the 10 per cent estimated by Grayson—of all big firms in the country are in violation of price controls.

A violation exists when a firm's profits margin is higher than it was during the period before controls were initiated last November.

All large firms are required to report prices and profits every three months to Grayson's commission.

Grayson said of the first 129 reports filed which were "properly filled out," 51 showed excessive profits and 78 did not.

Reuss based his 40 per cent estimate of violations on those figures.

Viets cripple 2 warships

SAIGON (UPI)—Two U.S. Navy warships were knocked out of action by North Vietnamese gunfire in the Gulf of Tonkin and two sailors killed, the U.S. command said Tuesday. In South Vietnam, four Americans were killed in a helicopter crash.

Radio Hanoi has said five U.S. ships were set on fire by Communist shore batteries but the U.S. command said only two ships, the guided missile destroyer Buchanan and the frigate Worden were hit by Communist fire and two sailors were killed.

The UH "Huey" utility helicopter was flying supplies for South Vietnamese troops in the field when it crashed of unknown causes in Phu Yen province, 210 miles north of Saigon. All four crewmen were killed.

About 25 rounds of 82mm mortar shells hit the U.S. helicopter base at Marble Mountain, adjoining Da Nang, at 1 a.m. Wednesday (noon EST Tuesday), the fourth rocketing in the Da Nang area in 10 days. No casualties or damage were reported.

Protests staged against bombing

By United Press International
Rallies, sit-ins and marches were staged Tuesday from coast to coast to protest the stepped up bombing of Vietnam.

For the most part, the demonstrations, part of a week-long antiwar offensive to climax Saturday with mass rallies in New York and Los Angeles, were peaceful. However, at Harvard University and at the University of Maryland some demonstrators were unruly.

A demonstration that began peacefully in Boston became violent as several hundred persons crossed into Cambridge, Mass., and ran through Harvard Square, breaking windows and setting a fire in the Harvard Center for International Affairs.

"They destroyed everything in sight. There were only two of us on duty so we couldn't stop them. They ran out of the building and fled when they heard the police coming," a University policeman said.

The young persons who crashed into the building also smashed typewriters, desks and chairs. At the IBM Building two blocks away, several windows and glass doors were broken.

College-council committee to study E.S. housing code

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG—In a low-keyed session Tuesday night, the East Stroudsburg Borough Council agreed to form a college-council committee to investigate what students label "discriminatory" housing practices.

East Stroudsburg State College Student Senate President Robert Richey said Monday students were prepared to boycott borough stores should no action be taken on the ordinance, which limits student residences to a specific area.

At the council meeting, he presented a resolution from the 70,000-strong Pennsylvania State Association of Student Governments urging "the immediate repeal of this ordinance."

He repeatedly emphasized to council members students would cooperate in revising the ordinance and made the suggestion to form a committee composed of members of the zoning board, councilmen, students and college officials.

"It is a constitutional right that students be allowed to live in any part of the borough," Richey said. "We want to work with the council to see if we can get this repealed or more acceptable to the students."

While students can rent rooms anywhere in the borough, apartments or houses can only be rented in the "R-2A" zone, with Interstate 80, Ridgeway, Braeside and Prospect Streets as the boundaries.

Richey contended the zone was "saturated" with students. Roughly 1,000 students rent in the borough.

Council Chairman Pearley Hunt claimed students throw parties and "annoy the neighbors." He added, "If you could correct that, I don't think there would be any trouble."

Richey replied, "I realize that students can be responsible for creating noise . . . as do other citizens of the borough."

Three Democratic hopefuls mine state for delegates

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Three front-running candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination mined populous Pennsylvania Tuesday for the 137 convention delegates to be chosen in the Keystone State's April 25 primary.

As unruly students heckled Sen. Hubert Humphrey from a stage at the University of Pennsylvania, Sens. George McGovern and Edmund Muskie scrambled hard for the remnants of a strong labor vote already pledged to their Minnesota colleague.

Predicting he would do better than expected in Pennsylvania's primary and that he would win in Massachusetts, McGovern donned a hardhat and received a cordial welcome from construction workers in north Philadelphia.

More than 300 miles to the west, Muskie attended fund-raising galas arranged by his major Pennsylvania benefactor, Gov. Milton J. Shapp, at Altoona, Johnstown, Pittsburgh and New Castle. The Maine senator wound up a tough day of campaigning at Youngstown.

"We're going to win in Massachusetts," predicted McGovern, adding that in Pennsylvania "we'll get a good, respectable share of delegates." Both states' primaries will be held April 25.

"If we had another week or 10 days, we would take the whole thing in Pennsylvania," said McGovern.

Humphrey's experience was the most serious instance of student antiwar protests since he campaigned for the presidency in 1968. A near capacity crowd of 2,000 at the university's Irvine Auditorium was about evenly divided between supporters of Humphrey and antiwar protesters.

As the protesters jeered, Humphrey spoke and answered questions for about 20 minutes before telling the audience: "We're not going to get anywhere haranguing." He then walked abruptly from the rostrum.

Speaking to often predominantly blue-collar crowds, Muskie promised to impose a minimum corporate income tax, to close tax loopholes that favored big corporations, to end the war and to create full employment as he swung through Appalachia.

Loyalty oath upheld

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, under Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, turned another philosophical corner Tuesday by upholding a Massachusetts loyalty oath requiring state employees to "oppose" the violent overthrow of the government. Writing for a 4-3 majority, Burger upheld a state's right to oblige employees to swear to "oppose the overthrow of the government of the United States of America and to this Commonwealth by force, by violence or by any illegal or unconstitutional method."

Chinese team visits White House

WASHINGTON — President Nixon welcomed the Chinese table tennis players to the White House Tuesday and told them the big winner of their exhibition tour of the United States would be peace and friendship between America and China. "We know in the course of your tour of the United States you will receive a good welcome," Nixon told the team in the sun-drenched Rose Garden. "We know that in your matches, there will be winners and losers. But there is one big winner and that is more important than who wins a match in table tennis."

Heartbeat signal warning

SAN ANTONIO — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson's flurry of irregular heartbeats were a warning of possible further serious heart damage, doctors said Tuesday, but Johnson was being treated for them and was in "good spirits" and recovering well. "It was a very, very early warning signal," said Dr. J. Willis Hurst, Johnson's heart specialist from Atlanta. "It was a warning signal that we must pay attention and abort move in with appropriate medication and prevent and abort something that would be more serious."

Millionaire drawing set

HARRISBURG — The first "Sudden Millionaire" drawing in the Pennsylvania lottery will be held April 27, the Revenue Department announced Tuesday. Gov. Milton J. Shapp will officiate at the special drawing at the Holiday Inn-Town hotel here. The deadline for ticket holders qualifying for the millionaire drawing to validate their tickets is 1 p.m. on Monday, April 24. All state liquor stores are validation centers.

Astronauts fix navigation system

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The Apollo 16 astronauts, overcoming a navigational failure that could have kept them from landing, Tuesday night gave the moonship Orion a last preflight check before arriving at the moon and won a "go" from ground controllers. "Again, as on two previous occasions, all systems in that vehicle look good," Mission Control reported after John W. Young and Charles M. Duke examined the Lem for 90 minutes.

If luck keeps falling their way, Young and Duke will ride Orion to a landing among unexplored moon mountains Thursday afternoon while their companion, Thomas K. Mattingly, keeps the command ship Casper in lunar orbit.

The astronauts arrive at the moon this afternoon. If they had not been successful earlier Tuesday in fixing a troublesome main guidance system, they would have been ordered to simply loop behind the moon and head for home.

Electrical interference had knocked out the guidance platform for 18 minutes. After nightlong study, experts on the ground radioed up special instructions to avoid a recurrence. Their preventive measures turned out to be exactly the ones that were used on Apollo 12 after it was hit by lightning on launch in November of 1969.

Before crawling from the command ship Casper into the lunar module, the astronauts spent more than two hours watching bright cosmic ray flashes inside their blindfolded eyes.

This was part of an experiment to try to help understand and identify the flashes more fully and determine whether they might be harmful to men on long space journeys.

Despite the momentary loss of the guidance unit, Apollo 16 was on such a true path to its landing site in the Descartes region of the moon that a midcourse guidance correction was cancelled.

But even so the astronauts had put in a busy day and had lost two hours of sleep when an alarm went off warning of the navigation troubles.

State releases shoppers guide to life insurance

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Insurance Department Tuesday released its "Shoppers Guide to Life Insurance" showing differences of up to 170 per cent on the same type of coverage.

Herbert S. Denenberg, insurance commissioner, said the guide "is one of the most important consumer documents we have published to date because few if any buyers understand the cost differences among life insurance companies."

The guide shows cost and premiums on an annual basis for a straight life insurance policy of $10,000 and ranks the 50 largest insurance companies in the state.

The guide also ranks the 10 best buys on a per year cost basis and the 10 highest costing policies on an annual basis among the 166 largest insurance companies doing business in the state.

"These cost figures show that the insurance companies with the lowest premiums are not necessarily the best buys," Denenberg said, "sometimes the company with a higher premium may be a better buy because it pays higher dividends and has higher cash values."

He said requests are still coming in at the rate of 100-200 per day for the earlier guides to auto insurance and hospitals.

The guide ranks insurance companies on a cost basis for the $10,000 straight life insurance policy for males at age 20 and females at age 23, males at age 35 and females at age 38, and for males at age 50 and females at age 53.

The two lowest at the youthful age were Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. at $22.40, and Central Life Assurance Co. of Iowa at $22.90.

The highest costing policies for the age group were Georgia International Life Insurance Co. at $61.00, and The State Life Insurance Co. of Indiana at $55.70.

Denenberg said the lowest cost per year at age 35 for males and 38 for females were Bankers Life Co. of Iowa at $42.00, and Home Life Insurance Co. of New York at $43.10.

The highest per year cost for policies at that age group were Georgia International Life Insurance Co. at $94.50, and the State Life Insurance Co. of Indiana at $88.70.

He said the lowest cost per year for policies at age 50 for males and age 53 for females underwritten by major companies were Bankers Life Co. of Iowa at $119.20, and National Life Insurance Co. at $125.80.

The highest costing policies for that age group were issued by The Employers Life Insurance Co. of America, of Delaware, at $205.20 and Georgia International Life Insurance Co. at $202.40.

Denenberg said the $10,000 straight life cash-value policy and the age groups selected for the guide were the most representative for purposes of comparison.

White House aide to testify in controversial ITT issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House, in a major concession to clear the nomination of Richard G. Kleindienst to be attorney general, agreed Tuesday to let a presidential aide testify in the Senate Judiciary Committee's ITT inquiry.

Peter J. Flanigan, an assistant to President Nixon, said he was satisfied, but other Democrats on the committee served notice they would refuse to be bound by the restrictions Flanigan laid down on his testimony.

But in a closed session late Tuesday, the committee agreed, according to Senate aides, that all questions about the antitrust settlement and an ITT pledge to help underwrite the cost of the GOP national Convention would be "fair game." Flanigan, the aides said, could not be asked questions pertaining to conversation with Nixon or with other presidential assistants.

The widespread expectation, however, was that — barring any major developments — the committee will reaffirm its approval of Kleindienst.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., who had led the fight for Flanigan's appearance, said he was satisfied, but other Democrats on the committee served notice they would refuse to be bound by the restrictions Flanigan laid down on his testimony.

Tax consultant cites need for regulations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Henry Bloch, president of the nation's largest tax consultant service, testified Tuesday his firm helps the "little guy" use tax loopholes, but that federal regulation is needed to stop abuses by unscrupulous tax consultants.

Bloch, who heads H.R. Bloch Inc., told the House Legal and Monetary Affairs subcommittee that registration of consultants could add to the Treasury "millions or possibly billions of dollars."

Bloch spelled his name with an "h," the firm's name is spelled with a "k."

Questionable practices and outright abuses by some consultants have given "the entire industry a public black eye and can undermine public confidence in a service which is so desperately needed by the public," Bloch said.

Unlike the wealthy who can afford high-priced legal aid, Bloch said, many lower-income people cannot understand the instructions and cannot help themselves to legal and de-served tax reductions.

Describing the Internal Revenue code as "100 per cent loopholes," Bloch said his firm gives valuable service to nonwealthy taxpayers because "many loopholes are available to what I call the little guy."

Bloch said that "for every loophole, if you want to call it that, there are somebody's benefits" such as sick pay, deductible union dues and interest charges.

Free care for poor ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proposed government regulations made public Tuesday would require an estimated 4,000 hospitals and nursing homes receiving federal funds to provide a specific amount of free care for the poor.

Failure to do so could cost the institutions their federal aid or even their operating licenses, a spokesman for the Health, Education and Welfare Department (HEW) said.

HEW proposed the action in the light of a series of lawsuits seeking to compel the admission of needy patients to hospitals in New Orleans, Weld County, Colo., Homestead, Fla., Webster County, W. Va., and the District of Columbia.

The guidelines would require nonprofit hospitals and nursing homes receiving federal money under the Hill-Burton program to provide free services to the poor at a level not less than 5 per cent of their operating costs or 25 per cent of their net income.

Present rules merely require them to provide "a reasonable volume of services for persons unable to pay."

Westfall police chief proud of his 'vigilante' volunteers

By DAVID NICHOLAS
Record County Editor

MATAMORAS — The Northeast Regional Council of the Governor's Justice Commission described the all-volunteer Westfall Township Police as a "vigilante" force in its recent Report on the Criminal Justice System in Monroe and Pike Counties.

According to Daniel Webster a "vigilante" is a member of a vigilance committee which is a "volunteer committee of citizens for the oversight and protection of any interest, especially one organized to suppress and punish crime summarily as when the processes of law appear inadequate."

Irving Hulst, who was responsible for organizing the Westfall Township Volunteer Fire Department and who is chief of the Westfall Township Police Dept. dislikes his force being called "vigilante."

In explaining the establishment of the force, the full-time businessman and part-time policeman said it occurred to the township supervisors and to many citizens a police force in the township would be helpful.

The problem developed when the township realized it didn't have a lot of money to pay anyone to run a police force so the "novel" idea of a volunteer police force was decided on.

Hulst said it not only benefited the township but also those people interested in being public servants. After all, he said, there are always people in a community who want to be public servants but have a good job which they do not want to give up.

What other benefit does a volunteer force have for the township?

Quoting from the "secret" document of the Governor's Justice Commission which was printed in The Pocono Record, Hulst said the township residents realize there are only so many state police in the county and it often takes a long time for state police to respond to a call.

Department scope
The scope of the department focuses primarily on complaints such as a loose dog, a lost child and minor car accidents along with misdemeanors.

"Anything of major consequence" is referred to state police, Hulst said, adding he is aware many cases require the investigation of a well-trained policeman who is more well-versed in legal proceedings than his men.

The 12-man police force is not by any means ignorant of the law, Hulst emphasized, noting the men have been to three traffic schools and one criminal investigation school.

The schools were conducted by state police from the Dunmore barracks for the benefit of the volunteers and other police in Pike and Wayne Counties.

Authorization

The police force is authorized by the Westfall Township Supervisors and is therefore a bona fide force. The township has the authority to establish a police force, Hulst stated, pointing out the municipality is also sole owner of all police equipment except uniforms (excluding hats, guns, handcuffs and badges which are bought by the men).

Most of the equipment which includes radios, monitors and a police car, was purchased through the fund-raising campaigns of the members and the township residents.

"One-hundred per cent cooperation" was the phrase Hulst used in describing the reaction of the township residents. He also spoke briefly of the advantage of having a man whom everyone knows coming to answer a complaint rather to have a state policeman come when a man perhaps involved in a neighborhood quarrel "often stays belligerent."

The police force's arrest record is made up primarily of traffic arrests for speeding, running stop signs and the like, Hulst said, although arrests for misdemeanors are made. Felonies are referred to the state police.

Getting back to the commission's referral to the police force as "vigilantes" Hulst said "we don't make up our own laws . . . we couldn't do that anyway."

He spoke of his men with great pride, noting, we are fortunate in the men that want to do this job". The volunteers' background is as varied as any force; several are railroad engineers, one is a partner in a body shop, a automobile mechanic, town road foreman and a former Connecticut policeman.

The volunteers do not normally patrol the township unless requested. Men going out during the week do not get paid although those who patrol Friday and Saturday nights do receive a stipend from the township.

The future of the volunteer force is unknown, Hulst said, noting the township is growing and perhaps in five years a "full-time force" will be necessary mentioning the proposed Tocks Island Recreation Area will bring large numbers of people into the area.

He doubts if a time will come when the volunteer force will be disbanded. He stated even if a full-time force is established there will still be a need for special police who could assist regular police on weekends and during special events.

Hanoi runs out of sympathy?

Perhaps the most surprising aspect of the escalation in the Vietnam conflict has been the response by not only the people of this nation, but of others as well.

During the peak bombing in the late '60s, the world was unanimous in denouncing the United States for its strikes. This time around, though, there has been little beyond election rhetoric from hopeful opponents of President Nixon and a few sporadic marches on U.S. embassies in foreign nations.

If Hanoi counted on another massive tide of revulsion to sweep the nation and a pacifist president into office, they may well have miscalculated. For when Bob Dylan sang, "The Times, They Are a-Changin'", he only verbalized the course of history. The times, they always change.

The anti-war sentiment has nowhere near the strength it once had. One reason, of course, is that so many U.S. servicemen have been withdrawn from Vietnam. Our commitment, while as deep, isn't as personal.

Another reason is that this time it is obvious that the North Vietnamese themselves were directly responsible for the escalation. The war was winding down; casualties on both sides had dropped and it seemed as though a political settlement of the conflict was not only possible but imminent.

And then the North Vietnamese tanks, guns and soldiers streamed across the demilitarized zone in clear defiance not only of the United Nations order that set it up so many years ago, but of the trend of the war itself.

Betrayed patriots defending their torn nation against the mighty aggressor? Not hardly. Not with those rushing advances of Soviet-supplied armor re-enacting the Nazi blitzkriegs of World War II. Not with the transparent objective of setting up a puppet "provisional" capital in An Hoc, from which to issue increased demands for yet more concessions from South Vietnam and her allies.

By that offensive, apparently designed to cut off another chunk of South Vietnam, since it began to seem impossible to secure the whole country, the North Vietnamese may well have exhausted any remaining fund of sympathy. Noteworthy was Britain's response. In the past, that nation had objected strenuously to bombing of the North; now the response was to endorse the bombing as a reasonable reaction to the North Vietnamese invasion.

Hanoi isn't fighting the Goliath any more. It's fighting another David. And anyone knows an underdog battle draws more sympathy than an even match. Everyone, apparently, but the North Vietnamese.

An obese friend bought a $7.95 diet book two months ago. So far all he has lost is the $7.95.

Our humor

A tramp stopped at a farm house and begged for a meal. The farmer had just been chased out of his pasture by a vicious bull and he was boiling with rage.

"Tell you what," said the farmer. "You can have all you want to eat and $10 to boot if you'll get that bull out of the pasture, dead or alive."

"I'll do it," replied the tramp. "I'll get him out easily. I'm an old bull fighter."

The farmer gave him a large rock and a pistol. The tramp jumped over the fence and walked toward the bull. The bull started for the tramp, the tramp threw the rock and hit the bull on the nose but the bull kept on coming.

The tramp fired the pistol, without effect, and he started running frantically around the field, the bull in hot pursuit.

Finally the tramp ran near the farmer and shouted: "Open the gate!"

"Why?" demanded the farmer.

"I'm bringing him out alive!" shouted the tramp.

Also in the mail is a kind note from Doris R. Deid, property tax collector in Vestal, N.Y. She says that there was a delay in paying on a small piece of property and the penalty was 17 cents which she put in herself; otherwise the penalty would have gone into the 1 1/2 per cent bracket. Such thoughtfulness in this world is warming... and saving.

Courts give fair trials

WASHINGTON — For many months people with loud voices, here and abroad, have been screaming that black revolutionaries and anti-war militants couldn't possibly get a fair trial anywhere in the United States.

It isn't true. It wasn't true. Now it is proven untrue.

The evidence is conclusive. Half-a-dozen such trials have been completed and in every instance the accused were either given light sentences or exonerated.

It is understandable that American Communists and others who want to tear everything down should try to discredit the courts. The others should know better. But it is hard to explain why the president of Yale University, Kingman Brewster Jr., assumed that the judiciary is guilty until proved innocent. Perhaps he was only momentarily courting favor with violent disrupters on the Yale campus when he asserted that the Black Panthers would undoubtedly be unfairly dealt with in the courts.

They weren't unfairly dealt with. Their rights were respected and protected. But even now when this unfair charge of judicial unfairness has been disproved, one searches in vain for any good-faith retraction, any apology of any kind from Dr. Brewster.

Black Panthers

The experience of the Black Panthers, the Chicago 7, the Soledad Brothers, Huey Newton, Bobby Seale and Dr. Benjamin Spock and the Rev. Philip Berrigan all show that the American system of trial by jury dispenses justice. It is justice visibly rooted to the premise that guilt must be proved beyond all reasonable doubt or the accused must go free.

Nearly all have gone free—set free by a judicial process which the president of Yale for some reason said was so tainted by a climate of emotionalism and repression that it couldn't be trusted.

No so. It hasn't worked out that way at all. Possibly those who kept proclaiming that the U.S. courts could do no right failed to understand the strength of the American judicial system or misread the climate of the nation.

Unfortunately, this attempted deriding and denigrating of the courts is providing a tempting facade behind which those indicted for serious crimes cry "political persecution" and thus try to influence the judicial process by public exhortation.

Seeking sympathy

This is what Angela Davis and the Free Angela Davis Committee in the U.S. and Communist groups abroad are seeking to do.

Miss Davis is accused of providing the weapons which were used when Judge Harold Haley was killed during a gun battle with police following an attempted escape by three convicts from a California courthouse.

Miss Davis is now being tried by a jury after being indicted by a jury whose verdict was that there was sufficient evidence of guilt to proceed. She is on trial for a pretty heinous crime. Wouldn't it be well to let the facts come out before claiming "persecution?"

And now a member of Congress, Rep. Cornelius E. Gallagher (D-N.J.), is resorting to the "persecution" play after being indicted on charges of perjury, conspiracy and tax evasion.

The indictment couldn't possibly be true, he argued, because he was just "a target of our secret police society."

This whole "I'm being persecuted" syndrome can't stand up against the record of the courts which have been consistently dispensing careful and fair-minded justice.

Quang Tri

I have only just finished reading the British historian Alistair Horne's account of the 1970 Blitzkrieg, "To Lose a Battle," and therefore the scenes on the TV screen each night, via TelStar satellite, are terribly familiar: the tanks rolling forward in apparent triumph, the inexorable advance of the well-drilled troops and their inextinguishable reserves, the bombed-out villages and cities, but, above all, the streams of refugees—carts, bicycles, children, livestock, makeshift vehicles, mattresses, dolls—pouring down the roads toward, well, anywhere.

World War II was a radio war, and this one is a TV war, but, Marshall McLuhan to the contrary, it is not all that different. I was just 10 years old when the Panzers broke through in 1940, and just old enough to have a complex reaction, not so much different from the one I have tonight: a tingle of awe at their speed, would it be 20 miles, today, on the French coast? Their planes, and the sheer athleticism of their entire operation. (Alistair Horne records that the Panzer genius, Gen. Heinz Guderian, was known to his men as Hurry-Up-Heinz, because he was always rushing ahead of his tanks in his command car, looking for opportunities to exploit.)

Son of lieutenant

But, even at age 10, there was another feeling too: that the French and the British might gather themselves, bend but not break, as they had in 1918, when, as I was aware, my father had been a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army artillery.

In 1930, it did not happen. The French broke and the British cleared out. There were no successful stands on the one-yard line. And yet, as Horne shows, all this was a good deal less inevitable than it appeared at the time. The French army, in fact, was a good one, and as well armed as the Germans. The Germans had incredible breaks they were far from deserving, and much more alert tactical leadership in the field. The British, in awe of the Luftwaffe, held back the RAF for a stand on the island.

No one can foresee the results, political and military, of the early successes the North Vietnamese have enjoyed in Quang Tri Province. But the visual image should be retained: their mechanized units and their regulars pouring down Highway One into the south. Whatever history says about the Vietnam war, it will not say that the South invaded the North.

A miscalculation?

On the really vital front, the North Vietnamese may have miscalculated. The Hanoi planners no doubt reason that American opinion is so weary of the war that a successful offensive will complete the process and bring Nixon to an effective surrender. But the first political result of the invasion has been to split the Democratic Party. McGovern, Muskie, and Lindsay have come out against any U.S. military... action against the invasion. Humphrey, Jackson, and Wallace, reflecting just about as much of the normal Democratic constituency, think the North Vietnamese should be thrown back. The open North Vietnamese offensive, therefore, has weakened the political vehicle most likely to accommodate the aims of the North.

Matter of judgment

In retrospect

By Bert Walter

Wayne County Judge James Rutherford should disqualify himself from presiding over a murder and manslaughter case now before him.

He should disqualify himself because of a conflict not in the best interest of justice and because of a precedent he himself has set by disqualifying himself in a related case.

The case now before him is that of John Reilly, former owner of the Hillcrest School for the Retarded in Hawley. Reilly had been indicted and arraigned on charges of murder and manslaughter in the March 24, 1970 death of Frank Dickerson, a patient at the school.

Judge Rutherford has been asked by Reilly's attorneys to dismiss the charges.

We don't believe Rutherford should make this decision.

Here's why:

Attorney A. Emerson Howell, chief attorney for the Hillcrest School, who served as Reilly's legal counsel at the outset of the current case is a friend of Rutherford.

Howell's son, Alfred, also an attorney, worked in Rutherford's re-election campaign last year, in which Rutherford was re-elected by only a 162 vote majority. The question on the ballot was a "yes" or "no" proposition if Rutherford should continue as judge.

Rutherford also set his own precedent in the matter when he disqualified himself from a civil proceeding involving Reilly. Reilly had filed a $1 million libel suit against Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings as the result of public statements made by Jennings following his investigation into the death of the Hillcrest patient. The criminal charges on which Rutherford had been asked to rule were a direct result of this investigation.

As we see it, Rutherford decided not to get involved in the libel suit because of the conflict. Wouldn't it then also hold true that the judge should disqualify himself from the criminal proceeding?

We think so, but the judge hasn't acted to do so, despite a formal request by Jennings to do just that. Jennings wrote a formal letter to Rutherford on Dec. 2, 1971, asking him to disqualify himself. Rutherford has made no response.

Rutherford has been asked by Reilly's attorneys to dismiss the charges for technical reasons. The request for dismissal is based on "improper wording in the original complaint and charges" and citing improper sections of the Pennsylvania Penal Code.

Wayne County District Attorney Robert Conway argued the complaint does not require specific wording for the charges involved. He also pointed out the wording for the indictment will be easily understood by any jury.

If Rutherford acts on the motion by the defense attorneys, we foresee a dangerous situation in which residents of Wayne County may lose faith in their judicial system.

The Pennsylvania Story

Humphrey runs on record

EDITOR'S NOTE: The five Democratic presidential candidates on the Pennsylvania primary ballot April 25 — Republicans have no contest — have been asked by Columnist Mason Denison to serve as guest columnist to express in their own words why their particular candidacy should be supported.)

By HUBERT H. HUMPHREY
Democratic Presidential Candidate

HARRISBURG — I have devoted my life to public service as mayor of a great city, as a leader in the United States Senate, as Vice President of the United States. I have come to know this nation, its problems and its people as few candidates have.

I run on a record of experience and achievement — a record of leadership in the civil rights struggle, in the field of arms control, in solving the tough problems of our cities. I am proud that I have fought the people's battle — the battle for the working man and women, the elderly, the young, the farmer, the victims of discrimination and neglect.

New leadership

I believe that new leadership is required today to summon the American people in making the 1970's a decade of dynamic development.

Building a better America means first-class quality education for all of our children. Quality education is the issue — not busing. A dual system based upon segregated education is not quality education. An integrated education system with modern facilities and well-trained competent teachers produce quality education.

The school bus must cease to be the symbol of a nation's failure to provide quality education for all its children. The needs of America go far beyond a school bus.

Building a better America means that our people must have the opportunity to work, to have jobs, to earn, to save — without the fear that economic catastrophes will darken their lives.

Lester Coleman, M.D.

Safe lump grows

I have a small growth on my Achilles tendon. Two doctors have told me that it is common and of no concern. But in the past year it has grown from the size of a small pea to that of a small grape.

Don't you think it should be removed?

Mrs. O. J. L., Conn.

Dear Mrs. L.:

You have been assured that the growth on your heel is not cancerous. Had either of your doctors been concerned or suspicious they would have suggested immediate removal of this growth.

That it has grown during the last year is probably of no great significance, but it certainly deserves re-examination.

Surgical removal is not dangerous or incapacitating in most instances. You will probably feel more secure psychologically if it is removed.

Is there any danger to daily body massage?

Mrs. K. G., Calif.

Dear Mr. G.:

I almost envy the person who can take the time out and indulge in this comforting interlude in a hard day's work. There are ex-

Ext. Service gives advice on wet basement problems

West End Bureau

GILBERT — Several West End residents have had free wading pools installed on their premises during the last several weeks of spring. The only problem is that the wading pools are in the residents' basements.

Each year at this time, the pumps start pumping and a great majority of rural residents fight a daily battle with Mother Nature to keep their cellars dry.

Recognizing the problem, the Cooperative Extension Service of Monroe County has offered some suggestions to reduce wet conditions in the basement.

According to the service, sloping the soil away from the house for 10 feet or more causes surface water to be carried away from the walls. Clogged eavestroughs and downspouts should be cleaned so eave drainage is piped away from the walls.

Another important reminder from the service, emphasizes that shrubbery should be kept away from the walls, as roots provide a route for water to follow the soil.

For especially bad conditions, the service recommends that a sump pump be used to pump out collected water in the basement.

Dehumidifiers should be used to reduce humidity and windows should only be opened when it is cool outside. Warm air brought in, then cooled inside the basement, may cause condensation on walls and floors.

Way up there

Personnel with the Electronics Division at Tobyhanna Army Depot recently installed this ABAR antenna system in Chicago onto a 100-foot tower with the aid of a crane having a boom of 140 feet.

TAD Electronic group needs no acrophobiacs

TOBYHANNA — If you're an acrophobic (dread heights), you'd probably want no part of the project with which personnel of the Electronics Division at Tobyhanna Army Depot are presently engaged.

Since acquiring the Alternate Battery Acquisition (ABAR) project, which entails the overhaul, field support and installation of various radar systems, division personnel have installed the skyscraping systems at Ft. Bliss, Tex., Chicago, Boston and Detroit.

In Detroit, the services of a crane with a 60-foot boom capable of handling the 8000-pound pedestal, was employed. The antenna is a parabolic network of aluminum pipe and screen measuring 40 feet from tip to tip. The Chicago antenna assembly was lifted onto a 100-foot tower with a crane having a boom of 140 feet.

The ABAR with its diverse installation procedures is another example of the versatility of personnel working at the local military base.

Area dam may be unique

LEHIGHTON — The Army Engineers' Beltville Lake Project, located on Pohopoco Creek near Lehigh, is believed to be the first dam built with a selective withdrawal system.

Sound technical and complicated? Well, it is. Put in simpler terms, what the system does — and has been doing since last fall — is provide the temperature-oxygen mix most beneficial to downstream fishlife in the water being released downstream.

The 192-foot high control tower has eight intake ports at varying depths, the highest and lowest being about 100 feet apart. The lake at the dam is some 128 feet deep, with an elevation of 628 feet above mean sea level.

In a body of water of this type, there is a surface layer, usually from 15 to 25 feet deep, which has a fairly uniform temperature and oxygen content as a result of being kept in motion by wind action.

Below this layer the temperature and oxygen content begin to decrease with increased depth. For example, an 80-foot deep reservoir having a surface temperature of 75 degrees could have, under certain conditions, a bottom temperature 20 degrees cooler. The oxygen content, too, declines at the deeper levels.

Since water with a high oxygen content is found nearest the surface of the reservoir where the water is also the warmest, and the cooler water is nearer the bottom of the lake, and has little oxygen, providing cool water with adequate oxygen for fish involves mixing water from various depths — thus the multiple level intake system incorporated into the control tower of the Beltville Dam.

Another related feature is a water-quality monitoring system which automatically extracts samples of water from each of the eight release levels, analyzes the samples for oxygen, temperature, turbidity and records the water quality data on tape for later analysis.

The system operates 24 hours a day so the best possible mix for downstream release can be achieved.

The eight intake ports are four feet square in size and their opening and closing is electrically controlled from the operator's deck at the entrance of the control tower.

A similar selective withdrawal system is planned for the Tocks Island Dam project.

Data chief named at Depot

TOBYHANNA — A new chief has been named for the Resources Data Division at Tobyhanna Army Depot.

He is William T. Clark of Scranton, who began his government employment at the depot in 1954. Clark succeeds Joseph Stout, who has retired.

The division is part of the Logistics Systems Support Agency, with headquarters in Washington, D.C. The agency collects data from all of the more than 100 activities within the Army Material Command on such matters as manpower, budget and finance, and performs accounts office functions of four major subordinate commands and Army Material Command headquarters.

Clark will supervise 50 employees, including management analysts, budget analysts and accountants. An Army veteran of World War II, he earned six battle stars while serving in Africa and Italy. He is a graduate of Scranton Central High School and holds a business administration degree from Lafayette College.

Firemen arrange program

ACKERMANSVILLE — Members of the Northampton County Fire School Association will hold an informal get-acquainted session with friends and neighbors of the school at 7:30 p.m., today, April 19 at the Washington Township Elementary School.

Firemen will meet with area residents to "discuss their mutual hopes and aspirations for the future of the school," according to association president Archie Brown of East Bangor.

"The volunteer efforts of the men who make up our local fire departments and who also direct and control the association's activities are an asset to the State Belt communities," he said.

In further comment, Brown said he hoped the meeting would result in "the establishment of mutual respect and cooperation that good neighbors should enjoy."

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Marcello Mastroianni will get a divorce (in France) any day. Then he'll wed Catherine Deneuve. She's expecting his child — and no mystery; they proclaim it! . . . Henry Youngman's writing his autobiography for Putnam's Sons and Carroll Carroll will collab. Our suggested title, a switch on Henry's oldest wife-joke: "Take My Life — Please!" The really set say multi-billionaire D. K. Ludwig bought the Gulf & Western Bldg. on Columbus Circle (housing the New Paramount Theater).

Star Julie Harris blamed herself for opening night insufficiencies of her "Voices" ghost drama. The author shouldn't let Julie take all that debit . . . Peggy Cass, who is back in Pace College for a degree, is a lunchtime 'tween-classes customer at Umberto's Clam House where Crazy Joey Gallo was rubbed out at dawn. Perfectly safe. No noontime assassinations are planned. . . We hear radio jaw-jockey Barry Farber, who chatters in 16 languages, just got married in one of them. Greek?

Robert Morse is a magnificently hammy knut in the new "Sugar" musical; even with the essentially distasteful problem of his attire throughout — campy transvestite costume (it's a Bdwy. stage version of the "Some Like It Hot" film) — he managed to keep the supposedly sophisticated premiere audience wildly hilarious . . . Ethel Merman sat behind us and virtually busted a girle; Mary Martin right in front bobbed her platinum bobbed-head in endless laughter; the audience liked everything, more than we can say for ourselves . . . It's a happy vulgarity, not prurient, odious sex, more the broad naughtiness practiced by Groucho, Bobby Clark, Ed Wynn, Harpo and others who pretended oversexiness and chased the girls, never to catch them . . . Tony Roberts, a handsome lad, makes a homely pseudo-female but is funny; Cyril Ritchard has far more polish and clowning elegance than his material, but his great style is most welcome; Elaine Joyce plays "Sugar" and is a darling numbskull; Steve Condo earned actual cheers for his tap-dancing gangster role . . . It's far from a total triumph, but it has its wildly insane moments we dearly wish had come more often. . . Broadway seems currently paved mostly with solemn-messaged intentions, but "Sugar" granulates happier targets. The score by JULIE Styne and Bob Merrill didn't strike a critical ear on first bending significantly important.

The aforementioned Elaine "Sugar" Joyce is Mrs. Bobby Van, wife of the "No, No, Nanette" dancing sensation. . . First nighter Mary Martin, after her two years in Brazil, looked no less than 15 years younger than last we saw her as she was leaving N.Y.

Harry Hershfield, at the Walter Winchell memorial at the Lambs Club, told a story no one on Bdwy. ever had encountered: that he'd been offered the N.Y. Mirror column and turned it down and suggested "an unknown kid named Winchell" for what the 85-year-old Hershfield said was the "$125 a week" job. Harry creates belated fiction: William A. Curley hired Winchell at $500 a week plus $1,000 for signing — after Walter had ignited the popular-journalism sky as the hottest element of the breezily vulgar old N.Y. Graphic . . . Bill Curley told us that story and WW's own version was a carbon. Songsmith Leroy Anderson ("Fiddle Faddle," "Sleigh Ride," "Syncopated Clock" etc.) composed his daughter Jane's wedding march when she married Peter Vercelli last weekend . . . New description of a reactionary: a liberal who just got mugged . . . We met Peter Falk on 3rd Ave. wearing his rumpled old "Columbo" TV series raincoat; he leaves "Prisoner of 2nd Ave." soon. Art Carney replaces and will tour the show next season.

A Lhasa apso bit Henry Fonda right in the ipso facto . . . Faces in places: The Cliff Robertsons (Dina Merrill) dashing through the snail course at the Sen Fare of the Aegean . . . Albert Finney at the Essex House in a short haircut. Quite the new hirsute thing in London, he says.

Ann Landers

People need educating

Dear Ann Landers: I've never read a letter like this in your column. It's time I did. A lot of people need educating.

I am going into my sixth month of pregnancy. I am still working and intend to continue to work for another two months if I can hold out that long. I need the money.

This advice is for the people I work with: I do not need to be told how pale and tired I look. I feel like a dishrag and I know I look like one.

I don't need to be told that I wear my wig a lot and that my own hair, when it is fixed, looks much better. It's easy to wear a wig and it's hard to wash my hair and set it at night after work.

I don't need to hear any more cute remarks such as, "If you've got three months to go, you'll never fit into the elevator." I have listened good naturedly and repeatedly to all the hollow and crude jokes about pregnant women. They weren't very funny the first time.

I don't need to be asked how we can afford a baby and how come I got pregnant so soon. We didn't plan it this way, but we are glad now and it doesn't help much when people put such questions to me. Print this, please.

What's Up Front Counts a Lot

Dear What's Up: Keep your sense of humor, Petunia. It will see you through when everything else goes belly up — if you will pardon the expression.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the woman who signed herself "Chump." It seems her husband is happiest when they are entertaining but she was fed up with wining and dining people who never asked them back. You told her if her husband wants her to entertain that's reason enough to do it. You blithely ignored her complaint that when she asks him to take her out to dinner or to the theater and he finds out no one has been invited to join them, he says, "Skip it."

Tell me, please, why a wife should play Perle Mesta to an ingrate like that? Perle at least has a staff of servants to do the work. Or she can hire a catering service. And I'll bet Perle doesn't have to borrow bridge chairs and silverware from next door, and then clean up the mess the next morning.

Your answer wasn't very sensible. I say if a husband is that inconsiderate, let him stew in his own juice.

Nobody's Fool

Dear No: Let him stew in his own juice, eh? Then what will you have besides a stewed husband? Sorry, I'm not about to tell a woman who is making an extra effort to please her husband to stop doing it.

Dear Ann Landers: Sometimes your advice is so dumb I can't believe it. I am only 15 and I know better than you about some things. For example: You told a teenager to get her ears pierced by a doctor and not by a girlfriend because "some people are allergic to certain metals and the ears could become infected." So — if you are allergic to certain metals, your ears will become infected even if a doctor does the piercing.

I know because a doctor pierced my ears and I got a terrific infection. Two of my girlfriends pierced their own ears and they had no trouble at all. Get it?

Korean DMZ not demilitarized

SEOUL (UPI)—When the Korean War came to a close nearly 19 years ago, the armistice agreement set up a no-mans-land which became known as the demilitarized zone (DMZ) of Korea.

The DMZ is no longer demilitarized and its northern half is full of illegal weapons, fortifications and armed men, according to the United Nations Command (UNC).

The UNC has repeatedly asked North Korea to remove all unauthorized men, arms and equipment from the forbidden zone, and to open the land for peaceful purposes.

The latest UNC demand on the DMZ was made March 23 at a meeting of the Korean Military Armistice Commission held at the truce village of Panmunjom.

North Korea rejected the UNC call as a "deceptive proposal."

North Korea said it was the UNC that was building fortified positions and installing banned arms in the DMZ.

The 380-square-mile DMZ was created as a buffer zone by the Korean armistice agreement which required withdrawal of all military equipment and forces from the area.

The 2.48-mile wide and 151-mile long strip of land starts at the Han River estuary 15 miles below the 38th Parallel in the west and ends near the 39th parallel in the east.

Down the center runs the so-called military demarcation line along which the two opposing forces had ground contacts when the truce came into force on July 27, 1953. The UNC patrols the southern half of the DMZ and North Korea the northern half.

Under the armistice agreement, each side is permitted to have 1,000 men, known as civil police, in its half of the DMZ at any one time. The men are supposed to carry only pistols and rifles. Automatic and crew-served weapons are banned.

As the Korean truce remained in force for nearly two decades without being replaced by a formal peace treaty, entry into the zone was restricted. The area has become a paradise for natural life.

In June last year, the UNC accused the North Korean Communists of building fortified positions inside the DMZ thereby turning the area into a highly militarized zone.

Seeking to return the DMZ to its original conditions as a buffer zone between two hostile forces, the UNC asked that both sides restate their dedication to the concept of a truce DMZ. The UNC further proposed:

—Selection of a specific point in the DMZ, clearing it of all weapons, military installations and armed men, and verifying through joint inspection that the area has been cleared.

—Repeating the clearing work and joint inspections until the entire land known as the DMZ has been covered.

—Banning entry into the cleared areas by military personnel or arms, but allowing civil workers from each side into the areas to rehabilitate the land for civil pursuits.

The North Korean Communists immediately turned down the UNC offer. There are no signs that they would go along with even part of the UNC proposal.

More recently, the UNC accused North Korea of building additional fortifications including a series of illegal barriers inside the DMZ in violation of the armistice.

Similar accusations were made by South Korean authorities. The most detailed was the one made by the South Korean defense ministry on March 1, which said North Korea had turned its portion of the DMZ into a staging area for future attacks against the South.

The ministry said North Korea built 225 fortified guard posts and kept nearly 9,000 troops in the DMZ.

Going back to dating

By Jean Adams

END OF LINE? (Q). Jane and I went steady for three months. After we broke up I dated Lyn a few times. One of my best friends began to like Lyn. I didn't want to lose him, so I dropped Lyn.

Also, I felt sorry for my friend, because his father had recently died. After that I dated Jane again for about two months. We weren't going steady and we got along pretty well together. Jane, however, began to like another boy so we quit dating. I thought another girl liked me, but she's stuck on somebody else. Well, now there is no one left for me to date. Don't tell me I can find another girl because I'm not a cool, swinging guy.

16 and All Alone in Louisiana cept your own state of mind to keep you from going back to dating either Jane or Lyn, or both. The same is true of other girls. All you have to do is be nice to them and ask them for dates.

NO TAN: (Q). When I was down on the shore this past summer, my face turned tan — a nice smooth tan. I was asked out to so many places and got so many hellos while I was down there.

When I came back I lost my tan right away. Now when I go any place my face does not have any color. It looks terrible and drives me crazy. When I can, I would like to get a sun lamp. Until then, how can I have a nice color on my face?

Too Pale in Pennsylvania

(A). I don't think your tan was the main reason people were friendly to you at the shore. You probably were in a better mood and were friendlier. People like friendly people. You can be friendly at school just as at the shore. You can be happy too. Try it. The magic is not where you are but in WHAT you are — wherever it is.

For the times you want to look special, you can simulate a tan by using a bronzer stick. I am sending you the names of two good ones.

FAT: (Q). I will be 15 in June and can start dating then. But I am very fat (215 pounds) and am afraid no interesting boy will ask me.

There is one boy who wants to date me. He is fat, too, and I don't much like him. Should I date him, or go on a strict diet and wait until I'm 16 or 17 to date somebody I really like?

Too Heavy in New Mexico

(A). Do not wait till June to do something you should have done long ago. Go to your doctor right away, get a diet, and follow it.

Do this now and by June, six weeks from now, you can be several pounds slimmer. Boys will soon be looking at you with new attitudes. If you will stick to the diet, you can be in first class dating shape before you are 16.

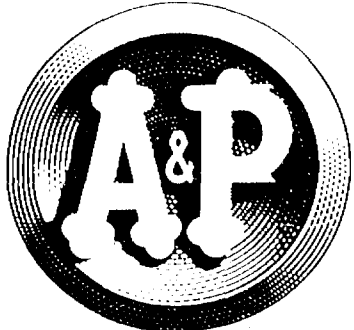

No matter what your weight at the moment, when a boy you want to date asks you, say yes. But never date a boy — thin, fat or in between — who bores you.

Erma Bombeck

Piece of junk

like the rumble seat and the hula hoop. I knew when we danced on our wedding day and he had to change to one black shoe and one white shoe that my dancing days were over.

There was always some excuse at dances for not dancing. "Erma's expecting," he said. (I was two weeks pregnant.) "By the time we get to the floor, the music will be over." (He knew a short cut through the parking lot.) "I'm going to see my doctor tomorrow and he doesn't want me to overdo." (He was having his teeth cleaned.) "Wait till they play something slower." (What could be slower than

"Massa's in the Cold Cold Ground.")

A couple of years ago, I tried again. With the current trend in music and dancing, I thought it was possible we could dance if we didn't have to keep in step or make any sense.

I selected one of the current offerings: Lettuce Leaves by Muffin Tin and his Electric Pimples.

"Does that do anything for you?" I asked, clicking my fingers and shuffling my feet.

"I can't seem to hear the beat," said my husband. "I guess I've never danced to two cars colliding before."

"You'll get used to it. Just relax . . . and look bored."

"I think I can manage that."

"You're looking at me! If I've told you once, I've told you a thousand times, look around you, look at your feet, but don't look at me and copy what I'm doing."

"I'm sorry. How's this?"

"Great. Now just vibrate and occasionally jerk a little. What's the matter?"

"I hurt myself. I told you this whole craze was just a fad. You mark my word . . . in ten or 15 years, no one will remember what dancing is."

That's what he said about electricity.

The Slim Gourmet

Asparagus

By BARBARA GIBBONS
Just when you think that spring will never happen, along comes mother nature with an apron full of fresh asparagus.

That snap-in-the-mouth crunchiness and just-born flavor of "live" asparagus is something you simply can't get from a can or a deep freeze... and at only 66 calories a pound, even could-be chubbies can afford an April orgy of fresh asparagus.

To delight in asparagus to the fullest, forget anything you've ever read or heard about how to cook it (particularly anything your mother ever told you)! Regard with suspicion any cook (or cookbook) who tells you to boil fresh asparagus 20 minutes. The world is full of "asparagus assassins" who can turn this delectable gift of April into a murky olive-drab mound of mush.

To an asparagus addict, perfectly-cooked asparagus is barely warmed through! It's bright green, crunchy to the teeth and still stands straight. If your asparagus droops over, it's overcooked!

Cooking time for that just-right crunchiness depends on the thickness of the stalk. Skinny spears can overcook in two minutes while the thickest stalks can take six minutes or more. Try to buy asparagus loose rather than in bunches.

The fun way to eat this April-fresh asparagus is with your fingers. Just pick it right up and dip it, tender tip first, in this buttery-flavored hot sauce that's zipped with Worcestershire. (Since asparagus is the star of this casual meal, match it with something simple, like lean steak or broiled burgers.)

Crunchy Asparagus with Dipping Sauce
1½ pounds fresh asparagus
Water for cooking
Sauce:
4 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1½ cups water
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Wash the asparagus under cold running water. Snap off the tough reedy bottoms (it is not necessary to peel asparagus.) Stand the asparagus heads up in a tall coffee pot and add two inches of water... or lay the asparagus on a cake rack in a large skillet with a cover.

Add water to the bottom of the skillet, but not touching the asparagus. Steam the asparagus, covered, two to six minutes, depending on thickness of stalk. Don't overcook. Meanwhile, prepare this sauce:

Mix the Worcestershire, water and cornstarch in a small saucepan over moderate flame. Cook and stir until mixture simmers and thickens slightly. Add butter and stir until melted. Pour sauce into individual dipping bowls. Serve with hot asparagus. Serves four. 69 calories per serving.

Menu for tonight: Quarter-pound broiled burger (extra lean ground round), asparagus with dipping sauce, half-cup of tender-cooked macaroni shells with one pat diet margarine, glass of Burgundy wine, coffee, slender slice of angel cake lavished with slightly-sweetened crushed strawberries... all for 500 calories!

(Spike your low-calorie main courses with wine, most of the calories disappear in the cooking! Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents to Slim Gourmet Recipes With Spirit, in care of this newspaper, 50 West Shore Drive, Sparta, N.J. 07871.)

Woodwind lecture highlights meeting

STROUDSBURG — Dr. Douglas Danfelt, professor of music at East Stroudsburg State College, was the guest lecturer at the Music Study Club of the Stroudsburgs' recent meeting.

Danfelt entitled his remarks "Woodwinds — Past and Present" and displayed his unique old instrument woodwind collection.

He noted woodwinds can be traced back as far as 2500 B.C., recorders to the period between the twelfth and fourteenth centuries, oboes to the sixteenth century and one-keyed flutes to the seventeenth century.

During a recital that followed, Danfelt, performed the "Sonata" by Bach with an eight-keyed metal mouthpiece dating back to 1867, "Sonata" by Telemann on the oboe, and "Rhapsody" by Willson Osborne, and "Carnival of Venice" on the clarinet.

Mrs. Jack Manchester presided over the business meeting during which the nominating committee presented the slate of officers for the 1972-73 term.

The slate is as follows: President, Mrs. Jack Manchester; first vice president, Mrs. Samuel Lee; second vice president, Mrs. James R. Marsh; recording secretary, Mrs. Marshall Phillips; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Francis Kutey; federation secretary, Mrs. E.W. Holden; treasurer, Miss Anna Stem; and directors, Mrs. James Toner, Mrs. E.W. Holden, Mrs. Lucy F. Quig, and Mrs. Samuel Lee.

Mrs. Holden, Northeastern Regional Music Week chairman, announced plans and musical activities for National Music Week, May 4 through 14, which will open with the Lancaster County Youth Symphony Orchestra at 8 p.m. May 7 at the East Stroudsburg High School.

On May 9, the club will sponsor a program on the "Music and Symbolism of Pennsylvania" at Pinebrook Junior College. Participating will be the Pinebrook Chorus and faculty members, the Shawnee Choir, the Music Club Chorus, the Salvation Army group, and a Pennsylvania composer as the club's guest.

The historical origin of the Hymn of the Month "All Hail the Power" was presented by Mrs. Raymond Vanderslice.

Oscar de la Renta creates super fashion 'presences'

NEW YORK — It will be a super-summer, if all goes as Oscar de la Renta plans.

The multi-talented New York designer, whose scope of fashion thinking is so encompassing that the United States Information Agency chose him, with his fashions, as the subject of a feature film to be distributed throughout the world, believes summer fashion is something "not to think about, but to feel."

Clothes for summer days and nights must be picturesque rather than chic, he points out. "But it is no longer clever to look deliberately old-fashioned, or deliberately costumed. The picture a woman makes must be her own, of-the-moment composition."

In his three separate collections for the couture, boutique and sportswear divisions of Oscar de la Renta International, the handsome designer creates a "presence" with every costume.

But he still establishes trends that show the way the fashion wind will blow next autumn.

The importance of black-and-white, for instance and of pure, crystalline colors replacing the moody tones of the past... The new depth of the armhole, the curvaceous waistline and the incoming variety of daring necklines.

Midsummer skirts will be full and rounded, presaging the same trend for fall, according to Oscar. But don't from Oscar de la Renta, expect bulky shoulders. "Bareness, a lot of it, but not bulk," he says.

...and sugar and spice gingham niceness in navy and white checked silk organza for those warm summer evening galas.

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

Opening lead: three of hearts.

Some of the best plays in bridge occur only rarely, the reason being that the proper setting for them doesn't come up very often.

Take this hand where West leads a heart. East wins with the ace, but, unless he is very much on his toes, South makes the contract.

East's proper return is the king of spades! If he makes this play, South must eventually go down one against normal defense. Declarer makes two spade tricks, a heart, three diamonds and two clubs — but no more.

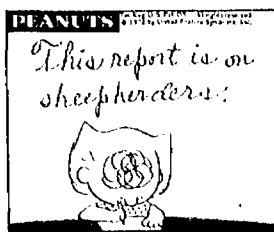

Note that if East makes the wooden return of a heart at trick two, declarer makes the contract by winning with the king and forcing out the ace of clubs.

There are compelling reasons for East to shift to the king of spades. It is not difficult to conclude that, on the bidding, declarer must have just about every high card not in sight, and that he will almost surely make nine tricks if allowed to cash dummy's clubs.

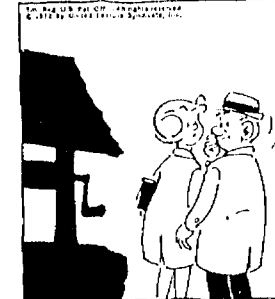

To stop declarer from making four club tricks, East must therefore attack dummy's side entry, the ace of spades. East knows that he may be handing declarer an extra spade trick by leading the king, but he should be happy to do so in order to neutralize dummy's clubs.

If declarer refuses to win the king, East simply plays another spade to force out the ace. East later ducks clubs twice and South finishes with eight tricks.

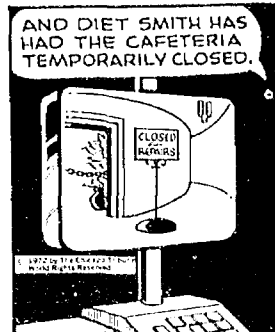

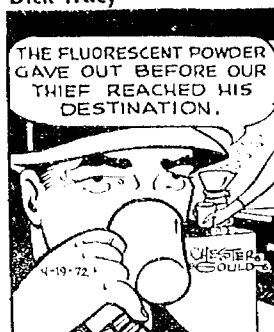

This willingness to sacrifice a trick in order to kill a crucial entry to dummy is generally known as the Merrimac Coup, and is also sometimes called the Deschappelles Coup, but, whatever its name, it is still a mighty fine play to make.

Letter from Russia: Watch those roads

YAROSLAVL, USSR (UPI)—The road back to old Muscovy cuts northeast out of Moscow and offers a bumpy, dangerous drive into a world left behind by Boyar princes, monks and Mongols.

This is Highway 9, "the old Russian road" to Zagorsk (founded 1340), Pereslavl-Zalesky (1152), Rostov-the-Great (1164) and Yaroslavl (1010).

Keep both hands on the wheel and both eyes on the pitted, shoulderless two-lane highway, for this is also a Soviet industrial road jammed with trucks, tractors and horse-drawn haywagons.

Highway 9 is a good example of the double-feature experience a traveler gets by following any Soviet highway, although he needs official permission to do it.

Bulldozers and derricks hack out space in the roadside stands of white birch and black pine for prefabricated apartment blocks. Trucks haul concrete slabs, logs, steel girders, bricks, soldiers and workmen at a snail's pace. Rural factories spew smoke over the flat countryside.

In this way the Soviet highway is a microcosm of what is going on in this beehive of a nation.

But old Mother Russia is hanging on along Highway 9, as everywhere. Log cabin homes equipped with TV aerials line the whole 160 miles to Yaroslavl, and grace it with their intricate gingerbread window shutters. Women in black shawls break through the ice of roadside ponds to fetch water and cart it home in buckets hitched to wooden shoulder-yokes.

The golden and silver onion domes of abandoned churches glisten through the trees. Crows caw in the belltowers and Family plan vital to China

NEW YORK (UPI)—In China, a nation of 800 million, family planning involves more than just clipping the stork's wings via contraception.

According to a doctor who's been there studying medical and family planning services, control over population growth also involves:

— "Discouraging women from marrying before the age of 24 and men before the age of 26."

— "Eliminating premarital relations."

— "Premarital relations are nonexistent, we were told, because of the political religious mysticism of Maoism."

Dr. Jaime Zipper reports in Population Chronicle, a publication of the Population Council.

Dr. Zipper, a professor in the department of physiology and biophysics at the Universidad de Chile, was among a delegation of Chilean medical doctors who spent 13 days in the People's Republic of China late this year.

Once married, a couple is not encouraged to have more than two children. "Having more than two children does not seem to be well-regarded by a community that exerts strict control over individuals by means of small cells distributed throughout the country," Dr. Zipper reported.

So-called "barefoot doctors," young men and young women trained in three-to-six-month courses, perform abortions and dispense all types of contraceptives, including the intra-uterine device (IUD). (The barefoot doctors also set fractures and perform appendectomies.)

Dr. Zipper said since 1959 the Chinese have been using IUDs as a method of birth control. Oral contraceptives also are used. "They are made in China."

A one-month injectable contraceptive also is used, but Dr. Zipper reported this has not been used for a prolonged period, hence it was not possible to evaluate its effectiveness.

Abortion and sterilization also are birth control methods in China.

"Any woman who requests an induced abortion can obtain it," Dr. Zipper reported. "Vacuum aspiration is the usual method. After an abortion a woman is entitled to 15 days of paid leave from her job."

Surgical sterilization is performed on any woman who has more than two children and requests the operation.

"The Chinese experience in family planning gave me tremendous hope that an integral program performed by paramedical personnel with a specific philosophy behind it might succeed," Dr. Zipper noted.

battlements of ancient forts. The rough road to all this is a relatively major thoroughfare in the Soviet scheme of things, as good as the Moscow-Leningrad highway.

It is exactly two lanes in most places. To drop a wheel onto the mud shoulder at high speeds is to court death.

Gas stations are plentiful by Soviet standards. There are three on the Moscow-Yaroslavl run, one outside each major town. The motorist pays in state-issued coupons, pumps his own gas and freshens up in filthy restrooms if the doorway is available.

But the rewards for this trip are rich.

Zagorsk, about 45 miles out of Moscow, is the opulent seat of the facing Russian Orthodox Church.

The first sight is the black smudge of a sprawling industrial town. The second, to the left of the road inside town, is the twinkling turrets of Trinity-St. Sergius Monastery, founded 1340.

Thick white fortress walls, half-mile around, surround a fairlyland cluster of gold domes, silver domes and blue domes dotted with gold stars. The seminary and ecclesiastical academy now operate amid cathedrals and palaces raised on the ashes of a 14th century Mongol raid and refurbished by the Communists.

The Zagorsk complex is unique in that nearly all its cathedrals and chapels are open for religious worship. It is Mecca for Russian Orthodox believers.

Beyond this, about halfway between Moscow and Yaroslavl, is Pereslavl-Zalesky with its mournful, fortress-like monastery founded in 1152. It houses an icon museum and cackling crows. Otherwise it is empty and awesome.

Rostov, originally called Rostov-the-Great, dominates the road with a white-walled jewelbox of a Kremlin that also was sacked by the Mongols in 1474. The visitor can follow an old woman on a loving tour of its gilded, frescoed ramparts and wonder how the Mongols ever managed to get inside.

Yaroslavl, the last stop, is an industrial center of 500,000 people that surrounds a historic old city, wedged on high banks between the Volga and Kotorosl Rivers.

Its stone battlements and towers and churches have been wrecked and rebuilt so many times since the Mongols first hit town in 1238 that it has taken on an almost modern look.

It looks something like Leningrad, when Leningrad was an elegant Czarist town of pastel palaces called St. Petersburg.

Russian pastor to talk of underground church

STROUDSBURG — "The Underground Church in Russia" will be the topic discussed at 7 p.m. today in the Berean Bible Fellowship Church, 23 S. Sixth St., Stroudsburg.

Rev. Earl Poysti, a native of Russia, will deliver the missionary challenge. He will also show a brief film taken of the Christian service in the forest of the Underground Church in Russia.

Poysti was born of missionary parents in Siberia. During his childhood he crossed Russia and Siberia three times while his parents were engaged in their work for the church.

After a brief visit to America, he sailed with his parents for the Far East where he spent five years in Manchuria, China, studying in a Russian school. Later he was graduated from the National Bible Institute in New York and New York University.

In 1961, together with Jack Wyrzten, director of Word of Life Fellowship, Poysti went to the Soviet Union and as a result of that visit began producing Word of Life programs dedicated to the youth of Russia.

The weekly half hour program is beamed into all of the Soviet Union, including Siberia, over several transmitters.

League schedules meeting

STROUDSBURG — The League of Women Voters of the Stroudsburgs will hold its annual membership meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 27 in the board room of the Monroe Security Bank and Trust Co., Main Street, Stroudsburg.

Election of the executive board and adoption of the organization's Local Program for 1972-73 will be decided at the meeting.

Nominated to the board for 1972-73 are Marjorie Farmer, second vice president, and Carole Adams, treasurer. Also nominated to the board for two-year terms are Alice Baumgardner, Anne Soles and Julie Weber.

Next year's program suggestions to be considered by the membership include the following:

Continued support for the Code Enforcement Program. Continued support and study for comprehensive planning for Monroe County.

And, study of the financial condition of the Monroe County Library.

The Local Program Committee has suggested to the membership that the organization discontinue its study of children and youth.

Survivor correction

EAST STROUDSBURG — Samuel B. Hartshorn, 81, of Henryville R.D. 1, who died Sunday in Stroud Manor is also survived by a son, Howard, of McMichael. The name of the additional survivor had been incorrectly reported in Tuesday's Record.

Legion executives adopt convention resolutions

STROUDSBURG — The Department Executive Committee of the Pennsylvania American Legion adopted several resolutions here in Stroudsburg before heading for the state convention.

Among those adopted was a resolution calling for the deferment of payment of state income taxes for all legal residents of Pennsylvania serving in the armed forces since July 1, 1971, until varying interpretations of the tax law's application to servicemen are resolved.

The Legionnaires stated the current Pennsylvania income tax, as applied to individuals in the active military service is "grossly inequitable."

They said the law will be virtually impossible to enforce as it relates to servicemen, often resulting in inequal treatment of individuals in identical circumstances.

It was also resolved that the Legion petition the Governor and the Secretary of Revenue and members of the state's Lottery Commission to have applications from American Legion Posts for ticket franchises immediately released.

The Legionnaires said veteran organizations have been denied application or consideration because Secretary of Revenue Robert Kane made the statement no lottery agencies will be granted such organizations until the organizations were not discriminatory.

The Legionnaires said the American Legion membership is composed of members of all national origins, color, race, creed and sex. And they want the lottery franchises.

Another resolution was passed calling for the establishment of a system in Pennsylvania for persons having information on drug traffic who may wish to make the information available to authorities without having to give their names.

The provision passed by the Legionnaires would make it possible for informants to pass information anonymously to Law Enforcement Agencies and collect rewards for such information upon conviction of suspects.

Proceedings against Equal Ahmad by the U.S. Naturalization and Immigration Service and the office of the U.S. District Attorney were requested in a final resolution passed by the Legion commanders.

Ahmad was one of the "Harrisburg Seven" who was not convicted of the alleged conspiracy to kidnap a presidential assistant and blow up installations in Washington.

Despite the fact Ahmad was not convicted, the Legionnaires urged action against the Pakistan citizen for his political activities in the U.S.

Orchestra, chorus give performance

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Pennsylvania Balalaika Orchestra and Chorus will be featured in a performance at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the East Stroudsburg State College auditorium.

The program will conclude the activities planned for the college's Fine Arts Festival which will be staged this weekend.

The theme of this year's festival will be Eastern European Culture, focusing on the countries of Czechoslovakia, Russia, Bulgaria, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Poland.

The public is invited to attend all the weekend events.

The Pennsylvania Balalaika Orchestra and Chorus, under the direction of Stephen Rudawski, has been in existence for three years.

The group is composed of all ages, including three generations of performers.

The goal of the performers is to foster and promote Balalaika playing and singing of ethnic music.

Another feature of the festival will be an exhibition of contemporary art from Poland and Yugoslavia to be on display from April 21 to April 28 in the lower lounge of Dansbury Commons. The collection is being provided through the courtesy of McGraw Hill Book Company.

A gallery talk will be presented by Edward F. Fry, former curator of the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, at 11 a.m. Friday. As an authority on contemporary art of Eastern Europe, he will share his views on the subject and will comment on the works, which he personally collected for McGraw Hill.

Proposed zoning changes may soon become official

BY A.P. CESARE
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg officials who have been studying the proposed rezoning changes for the past two months hope to take official action on the changes next Tuesday night, April 25.

Members of the Stroudsburg Council and the Planning Commission had been meeting for informal discussions on the proposals. Tuesday night, they completed their studies and will move to make them official next week.

New changes, terminology, and proposed zoning classifications came under review at the latest session.

Borough planning consultant Victor Rodite, who headed the joint sessions, used large maps denoting the proposed classification.

They included: R-1, low density residential; no longer called single family residential; R-2, medium density residential; R-2A, medium density residential transitional. The difference between R-2 and R-2A is that the latter could be developed for multi-family dwellings.

Another classification, R-3 was set aside for high density, (high rise apartment complexes). Also included were C-1, general commercial; C-2, central business; C-3, heavy commercial and O-1, open space.

High density is a residential zone where various housing types are permitted. Multi-family housing is only permitted under "Special Use" with a maximum of six stories.

"Special Use" requests must go through the Zoning Hearing Board (formerly Board of Adjustment) and the borough planning commission.

The First Ward and the Dreher Avenue-West Main Street areas came under lengthy discussion. But officials found the First Ward one of the most difficult to resolve.

Basically, the ward is proposed as a heavy commercial zone (presently it is R-1, in dustrial) with a small segment labeled for high density.

Dreher Avenue and West Main Street, an area for the proposed Stoffel Street Urban Renewal, was designated for 50 dwelling units. But, it was indicated two or three times that amount could be established depending on the builder.

It was also decided that under federal appropriations, that Housing and Urban Development, (HUD) priorities take precedent.

Several areas were incorporated for change. South Stroudsburg was proposed to change from R-1 to R-2 area; the Foxtown Hill area from R-3 to R-2A.

Sarah Street area to the south between Seventh and Eighth Streets was proposed from R-2 to R-2A zone.

The downtown sector from the Stroud Mansion to Leggieri's Restaurant on North Ninth Street, is mapped R-2 but an R-3 zone is being requested.

County asked to sponsor program for senior citizens

By SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Sophie West, secretary-treasurer of the Monroe County Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons, has asked the county commissioners for assistance in formulating a county program for the senior citizen residents.

Telling the commissioners the membership of the AARP has passed the 200 mark, she urged that they consider organizing and partially financing a countywide recreation program for the organization in addition to relocating the group from their cramped quarters at the Stroudsburg YMCA.

The commissioners vowed to investigate the requirements of county involvement in such a program and temporarily tabled the matter.

Fred J. Lee, of East Stroudsburg R.D. 3, said he was not fully aware of what happened at the meeting with the county officials but underscored the necessity of a county sponsored program for senior citizens.

Lee attended the White House Conference on Aging in 1971 and was recently appointed as the Monroe County representative to the Governors Council on Aging in Northeastern Pennsylvania.

Lee stated that no one organization is looking for anything from the county commissioners, dispelling the understanding that Mrs. West's appearance before the commissioners was to seek aid in relocating and funding AARP functions.

"It's not a club affair," said Lee. "There's a half dozen or so senior citizen groups in the county but what is needed is one group to represent all the senior citizens. It has to be sponsored by the commissioners."

Lee noted that senior citizen functions are presently being sponsored by Carbon, Wayne and Northampton Counties but Monroe County has made no visible effort toward obtaining state funds for a senior citizen program.

Tight pockets

"We can't move the commissioners for any kind of support other than lip service," charged Lee. "They're quick to declare Anti-Litter Week or Be Kind to Blind Dogs Week but when it comes to putting up the money, they have fish hooks in their pockets."

He stated that from all the officials he has spoken with on the state level, it is his understanding that the only way state financial support can be obtained is if the county forms the organization and backs it financially.

"The funds from the state are obtained on a matching basis. Whatever the county puts up, the state will match," said Lee.

He pointed out there are over 5,000 people in the county of retirement age and equally as many within 10 years of retirement. He noted the establishment of a county senior citizen's organization would not only benefit those who need the activity now, but also those who are approaching the age of retirement.

"They (the commissioners) give the airport in Mount Pocono $15,000 a year and what good does it do the people in the county? They spend a lot of money on a lot of programs while financial support for the senior citizens is seriously lacking," he said.

He finally pointed out that the way to the commissioners' pocketbook may be through the ballot box, noting "There may be some considerable political 'clout' in the senior citizen group" in Monroe County.

Salaries for vo-tech teachers run from $7,300 to $11,400

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter
BARTONSVILLE — Proposed teacher salaries for the Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School range from $7,300 to a maximum of $11,400, The Record has learned.

These are the figures James Bell, executive director of the school, uses in interviews with prospective teacher applicants, according to informed sources.

The salary guide was not scheduled for release until all Monroe County school districts ratified 1972-73 teachers' contracts. Pleasant Valley has set its contract for next year; Pocono Mountain, Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg have not.

Sources say the vo-tech salary schedule—as it now stands—needs only approval in an open meeting.

The figures are basically the same as those approved by Pleasant Valley for the next school year. A first year teacher with a bachelor's degree at Pleasant Valley receives $7,200, with a maximum of $11,900 for bachelor's holders in 20 steps over 29 years.

A first-year teacher with a master's at Pleasant Valley receives $7,900, with a 20-step maximum of $12,900. Those are nearly the same figures the three other public school districts have this year.

Intern salaries
The $7,300 salary at the vo-tech school is for interns. An intern certificate means permission to teach until vocational-I status is reached.

An intern does not need a bachelor's degree, but must have a minimum of two years beyond the learner's period in his trade to apply.

Ten $300 steps are listed on the guide. An intern could reach a maximum salary of $10,000. "To be placed on any guide column, a teacher must present proof of credits earned or the appropriate certification to the Director of Vocational Education," according to the schedule.

It also stipulates: "Credit for trade experience will be awarded on the basis of one step on the appropriate salary schedule for each two years certified trade experience in the area of instruction. A maximum of 16 years or step 8 in the guide may be awarded."

This means a first-year intern with 16 years of trade experience would start at $9,400.

Bachelor degree
A bachelor's degree holder with no teaching experience would start at $7,500. Ten $300 steps come to $10,200. A person with the "maximum of 16 years" trade experience would get $9,600.

Those with bachelor's degrees and 15 credits beyond that receive from $7,700 to $10,400 in $300 steps.

At the master's degree level, salaries range from $8,100 to $10,800. Master's holders with 15 additional credits would receive $8,400 to $11,100.

At the master's degree level plus 30 more credits, salaries range from $8,700 to $11,400. The $300 figure is again used for raises in each of the 10 steps.

Salaries at Pocono Mountain this year for bachelor's holders range from $7,200 to $11,800 in 20 steps, with salaries for the master's degree at $7,800 to $12,700.

At East Stroudsburg, persons with a bachelor's can range from $7,200 to $11,400 in 17 steps. Master's degree salaries go from $7,800 to $12,300.

Stroudsburg salaries for bachelor's degrees run from $7,200 to $11,400 in 14 steps, with master's degree personnel ranging from $8,000 to $12,200 in 15 steps.

Light turnout for Tocks

EAST STROUDSBURG — Representatives from the Delaware River Basin Commission were on hand at East Stroudsburg State College Tuesday night to discuss their aspect of the Tocks Island project with anyone who wished to pose questions about the proposed dam and its ramifications.

Twelve people were present in the audience in room 113 of Stroud Hall on the campus to hear Brinton Whitall and Senore Selzer of the DRBC highlight the project.

Both men spent most of their presentation outlining the sewerage plan for the recreational area in the belief that was where most of the questions from the floor would be directed to.

The first question asked pertained to the actual need for such a mammoth water supply the dam would supposedly provide.

The second wanted to know if the DRBC had taken the trouble to devise a suitable law enforcement study with the same pains they had taken to project the future sewage treatment facilities necessary to accommodate the anticipated population expansion.

A third person was concerned that the DRBC was responsible for the public utility companies plans to place 11 nuclear power plants throughout the basin area—and so went the discussion. No one wanted to talk about sewage.

Whitall, who described his position with the DRBC as a "generalist," pointed out that the metropolitan areas of New York and Northeastern New Jersey that tapped portions of the Delaware for water supply could not effectively utilize the "high flood skimming method" of obtaining water for human consumption from the Hudson, Passaic and Raritan river basins.

"This is because the water in these areas is already one-half to two-thirds waste," said Whitall. He also noted the Smith-Freeman Skimming Method was rejected by a number of investigative agencies, including the National Geographic Service, as not practical.

He also pointed out that the huge amounts of water now required by public utilities to meet the ever growing demand for electricity will double by 1980 and quadruple by the year 2010.

In response to the question about projected law enforcement problems with a large population influx, the DRBC representatives pointed out they were only "water people" and James Isenogle of the National Park Service fielded the question.

Should the contamination not be found there, the Department stated it's up to Texaco and Gordon to find the leak, which Gage said produces an offensive odor.

Defect detection program on tap for county children

By DAVID J. NICHOLAS
Record County Editor

STROUDSBURG — Plans for a state mandated physical defect detection clinic for the county's children were announced Tuesday at the meeting of the Monroe County Board of Public Assistance.

Carmine DiPronto executive director of the board, said the plan must be implemented in its first stages by June 1 and is expected to affect about 942 children whose families are receiving some sort of public assistance from the state.

"The purpose of the program is to detect and correct defects in children so that they 'will not be a burden to society when they become adults.'"

Initially the plan will only affect children of families receiving welfare but will eventually include all children in the county. The first youngsters to be affected will be those up to five years of age. It will eventually include persons up to the age of 21.

No definite plans as to the location of the clinic were aired and there was some discussion as to how many locations will be needed for the county and where they will be located.

Some concern was expressed for the potential problem of transportation should the clinic be situated somewhere other than Monroe County. Since no definite plans have yet been set, DiPronto was unable to answer the queries of other board members.

Duplicated effort

A brief discussion was also held on the possible duplication of effort where physical examinations are concerned since area schools examine their students on a periodic basis. The school exams, according to one member, include ear, eye and tuberculosis tests.

The advantage of the mandated program would be the examination of preschoolers who are not affected by school related examinations. DiPronto mentioned since only public assistance children would at first be affected the school programs would have to remain until the scope of the project broadened.

The board is still looking for financial means to start a day care program in the county. A previous plan was vetoed by the Monroe County Commissioners at a recent meeting.

Since the program comes under matching funds from the federal government, a private sponsor willing to contribute an initial several thousand dollar investment would be required although the availability of such a sponsor is not known.

The board members said the apparent unwillingness to start such a program may stem from the fact the state will control such a project in the county.

It was also reported the case load handled by the county board is dropping because of a substantial increase in employment in the area. DiPronto said employment rose by 700 jobs during the months of December, January and February.

Board members said Monroe County is more fortunate than many other counties in the Commonwealth because of a variety of employment possibilities including the General Hospital of Monroe County, various industries plus numerous resorts located in the area.

DiPronto reported on an order from the Department of Welfare in Harrisburg which will require approval of the Region II office of the department in Scranton of all key personnel positions described as offices above that of supervisors including executive director and most types of specialists.

The board also repeated its refusal to divulge the names of those receiving public assistance in the county, an order handed down by the department in Harrisburg.

It was also reported three requests for financial aid of $200 each were turned down. The requests were for purchase of maple tapping equipment, seed purchase and the conversion of an internal combustion engine in a truck to a propane gas driven engine.

The requests were described as personal quirks and not deserving of public funds.

Visual pollution

One of the purposes of Environmental Awareness Week is to remind people of the dangers of ignoring the environment and its importance. Scenes of abandoned cars dot the landscape of Monroe County resulting not only in visual pollution, but creating safety hazards as well.

Market closes with gain

NEW YORK (UPI)—Although late profit taking cut into early gains, the stock market finished ahead Tuesday in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Gordon and Robert Johnson, analyst for Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis, said they were not surprised by the profit taking. "The market needs a correction," he said. "It just can't go straight up forever."

Both men saw the market climbing over the near term, although not at a sharp pace. "The number of shares in this range will make it difficult for it to move rapidly," Gordon said. "It is sort of stogging along."

United Utilities was the day's most active issue, off $\frac{1}{8}$ at 18 $\frac{1}{2}$ on 219,200 shares, including a block of 203,500 shares at 18.

Alaska Interstate was second on $\frac{3}{8}$ at 44 $\frac{1}{2}$ on 206,700 shares.

General Motors advanced 1½, Ford 1½ and Chrysler ¾. Chrysler had a better first quarter than last year.

Prices were mixed in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index finished unchanged at 28.49. Volume totaled 6,260,000 shares, up from the 5,790,000 traded Monday.

Drake, left, senior vice president in charge of Stroudsburg office of First National Bank of Eastern Pennsylvania, watches with Stroudsburg Mayor Warren Loney as teller Bonnie Dotey runs through computer operation in newly remodeled facility at Seventh and Main Streets, Stroudsburg. Harris poll: Prospects good

Public supports Soviet trip

BY LOUIS HARRIS

President Nixon's upcoming summit trip to Moscow meets with overwhelming support from the American people, 74 to 13 per cent. The public also thinks the prospects are good for the United States and the Soviet Union to "make long-term agreements which will work," 55 to 31 per cent.

The President's recent conference with Chinese leaders in Peking met with comparable widespread public backing here at home. It is apparent that large numbers of Americans are convinced the time has come to thaw out the Cold War and to find ways to live in peace with the major Communist powers.

Recently, a cross section of 1,557 households across the country was asked: "Would you favor or oppose agreement between the United States and Russia on (READ LIST)?"

AGREEMENTS BETWEEN U.S. AND RUSSIA

	Favor	Oppose	Not sure
Bringing about a Middle East settlement	82	7	11
Exchanging scholars and cultural groups	81	9	10
Getting European countries to pledge not to go to war against each other	80	7	13
Reducing the number of American and Russian troops in central and western Europe	76	9	15
Expanding trade between the two countries	74	13	13
Joint exploration of oceans	73	12	15
Limiting anti-missile (ABM) systems	73	13	14
Taking joint action if another nation threatens to use nuclear weapons	68	15	17
Joint exploration of outer space	66	23	11

Out of nine areas tested, in no case did fewer than two out of three Americans 18 years of age and over fail to endorse such U.S.-Soviet agreements. Obviously, the public here at home is ready for wide-ranging negotiations in Moscow if Nixon can make them.

Speculation has included the possibility of expanded trade between the two countries, along with some beginning agreement on control of anti-missile systems. But two other items on the list which have been subjects of Russian pressure on the United States seem to have the backing of American public opinion.

The Soviets have asked for mutual force reduction in Europe. This meets with 76-nine per cent approval from the American people. The other is a European security conference between NATO and Warsaw Pact countries, pledging some form of non-aggression. Again, American popular approval of such a step is 80-seven per cent.

At the top of the list of what the public would like to see happen in Moscow would be a settlement in the Middle East. While no such peace could be obtained without the specific participation of Israel and Egypt, nonetheless much of the Arab military capability in the Middle East dispute depends on Soviet weaponry and aircraft. By the same token, the United States is the chief supplier of military jets to Israel. Certainly any movement toward the two superpowers' working together to guarantee peace in the Middle East would be welcomed by American public opinion.

Of course, it is one thing for the public in this country to express a desire to see such agreements come about, but it is quite another matter to have them consummated. Yet public optimism for agreements "which will work" appears to be high. The cross section was asked:

"Do you think it is possible for the U.S. and Russia to come to a long-term agreement in the world which will work, or do you feel it is not possible for that to happen?"

	Total Public
	Per Cent
Can do it	55
Won't work	34
Not Sure	11

By three to two, the American people hold out a relatively high degree of optimism that many of the agreements they would like to see reached between the U.S. and Russia can indeed take place. This finding is quite contrary to the mood that preceded Nixon's journey to Peking. Then the public was wary, not expecting much.

Firemen run marathon?

STROUDSBURG — Fifty-four Stroudsburg volunteer firemen, in the spirit of the Boston Marathon, ran up the car ramp of the Sears parking facility Monday night carrying 47-pound extinguishers — the fire was out when they got there.

Tom Phillips, Stroudsburg chief, said the carburetor linkage on a car ruptured spilling gas onto the heater pipes and igniting. Phillips admitted he and another fireman took the elevator and avoided the breath-taking exercise.

would take place beyond an opening up of communication.

It is apparent that both public desire and optimism are at a much more advanced stage in the case of Soviet-American relations than in the case of China.

This has its problems, however, since expectations were not high for specific agreements from the China summit meetings, the results did not let down the American people. But in his summit trip to Moscow, Nixon would appear to have higher stakes than in his journey to Peking, at least as far as levels of expectation are concerned.

If the President comes home relatively empty-handed, there could be a visible letdown back home. This in turn could tarnish his carefully built reputation as a man who is "working for peace in the world," which appears to be the bedrock of his strength for re-election in November.

By the same token, realization in Moscow of some of the specific agreements favored by big majorities of the public, limited though they might be, would greatly enhance Nixon's reputation as a master of summitry.

Flying squirrels?

They aren't, but they have moved into backyard in Houston, evicting their feathered friends. (UPI Telephoto)

First floating city on boards

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HONOLULU (UPI) — The world's first floating city, technologically possible and ecologically healthy, may be rising from the Pacific if a leading ocean authority can get his proposal moving.
 Dr. John P. Craven, Dean of Marine Programs at the University of Hawaii and Hawaii's first State Marine Affairs Coordinator, is hoping to build such a city three miles off the famed Diamond Head landmark.

Initially planned as a marine exposition in 1977 called "Ocean Expo," the floating city would later be converted into a long-range community, with a three-tiered arrangement of buildings and towers above the water, a continuous highway for the movement of goods and people by hydrofoil, ferry and barges on the water and an underwater city for industry and manufacturing.

"The whole purpose behind floating cities is to save our environment," Craven said. "By building cities in the sea, we release more of our land for ecological parks."

"Those who label floating cities as ecological disasters are speaking out of blind prejudice," Craven said. "It's frustrating when critics say a floating city would be an eyesore."

"The uninterrupted horizon is boring. A ship is regarded as an attractive element, and there's no reason why a floating city can't be made aesthetic."

Craven contends that floating cities would be beneficial "for any coastal area with a high population density." His determination is propelling Hawaii into world leadership in floating city activity.

Kiyonori Kikutake, a leading Japanese architect and supporter of the floating cities concept, came to the university and participated in the planning project. The University has received an $85,000 Sea Grant to build a large-scale model, and Craven is hoping the Hawaii Legislature will appropriate funds to help finance an "Ocean Expo."

On platforms
 Craven's circular floating city would be built upon platforms in the ocean buoyed by

Decker testimonial slated

DELAWARE WATER GAP — A testimonial dinner for former Water Gap mayor Fred Decker will be held Friday, April 28.
 Decker will be honored for his service to the community which covered some 44 years. He served in numerous official capacities, including police chief, water manager and sanitation superintendent as well as mayor.

The event, beginning at 6:30 p.m., will take place in the new Delaware Water Gap fire house.
 Tickets are available from any council member or may be obtained by phoning Celia Siptroth at 476-0560. The ticket deadline is Saturday, April 22.

Field Asst. to stop here

STROUDSBURG — Senator Richard S. Schweiker (R-Pa.) announced that his Field Assistant, Robert Heath, will be traveling throughout Pennsylvania for the fourth consecutive year meeting with residents to discuss various problems they may have with the Federal Government.

Schweiker said, "Bob's trips have been quite beneficial to me. He has been able to meet with over 1,000 persons on these trips and has given me a first-hand look at problems facing Pennsylvanians." He continued, "I would like to make these trips myself but my Senate duties preclude this. I hope the people will take advantage of the opportunity and stop in to see Bob."

Heath will be in Stroudsburg on Tuesday, April 18. He will be located at the Stroudsburg Post Office, 701 Ann St. from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The general public is invited.

modules, with a module consisting of three underwater flotation cylinders. Huge columns would extend deep into the water, the site of underwater industrial and manufacturing activity, but would not be attached to the ocean floor. Floating cities of this type require at least a 300-foot water depth. Families would live in slices in cylindrical towers above the platform.

"We've got the technology to produce a floating city now," Craven said. "Since the main deck would be 30 feet off the surface, it would be completely stable, unaffected by waves or rough water. Seasickness would not be a problem."

Craven hopes to convert the exposition city into a real one accommodating about 10,000 residents with a daily occupancy of 30,000 to 40,000. The exposition, about three-quarters of a mile in diameter, would be expanded to two miles. Craven estimates the cost of the floating city at about $400 million.

The exposition would enable the public to see what a floating city entails and the expansion would be accomplished by the addition of more modules. Craven said the age-old problem of obsolescence and decay would be easily solved by removing a module and remodeling or repairing it "without cluttering up the city with reconstruction."

Craven said the whole city could be moved to a new location under the module concept.

"The ability of the city to move to new environments in the event of ecological accidents, the elimination of the auto, the ease of access to goods, services, recreation and community activities, the ability to collect and process waste, should make the city essentially pollution free," Craven said.

Since all facilities would be within walking distance, Craven said, cars, roads and highways would be eliminated. Transportation would be by foot, with escalators and elevators.

"Waste management should be relatively easy," Craven said, "with direct vertical shafts for solid wastes and pipes for liquid wastes collecting below the lower deck of the platform. Wastes could then be collected in barges for transport to processing and recycling sites."

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)

— Stellar influences excellent for constructive action. If judicious plans have already been made, carry them out diligently; make some, if you note a stalemate to progress.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus)

— Look below the surface for leads which will help you solve problems, get ahead faster in your occupation. A good day for home and family concerns.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini)

— Think constructively and reckon with all possible eventualities before undertaking any new enterprise. In fact, day will be better for routine matters than for unusual ventures.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)

— Mild influences. Plan and execute an efficient schedule, devoid of all clutter. Pay special attention to details and figures.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)

— Greatly improved influences to help those of you who have energies, disposition and general setup under control. Especially favored: Arts, crafts and all activities requiring manual dexterity.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Especially favored now: Business matters, the development of better tactics and systems. Re-examine recent ideas and plans.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — You may run into some opposition and ill will now, but don't "fight back." Counteract by being your most ingratiating self. It will work wonders!

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Tendencies to avoid now: Restlessness and scattering energies. Don't make agreements impulsively but, on the other hand, remember that "little ventures, little gained." Good judgment needed.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — A favorable day, on the whole, but do not be heedless or let "little things" go unattended. You should make fine headway in some areas.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — There will be several opportunities to advance your status now, but you may have to ferret out some for yourself. With your know-how, this should be easy — and you'll enjoy it.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Avoid a tendency toward indifference. You may feel "lukewarm" about some suggestions proffered, but look into them anyway. They COULD prove of value.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Note the difference between gold and tin. Do not be fooled by flatterers. This day is open season for extremes, flightiness. Avoid!

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine mind and your quest for knowledge is unceasing. You are imaginative, persevering and extremely ambitious; would make an outstanding salesman and can promote your wares in a way that makes them irresistible. In fact, your business acumen is one of your greatest assets and, whether you choose industry, commerce or an artistic profession as a career, you are bound to make it pay. You are inventive, too, especially in the field of gadgetry. Other fields suited to your talents: Education, literature, the law and the stage. Traits to curb: Impulsiveness, over-optimism, gressiveness, easy loss of temper.

Insulation pays off

When Installed by MARSHALLS CREEK INSULATION

New and existing dwellings can be protected from summer heat and winter cold with the advent of new insulating materials and methods of installation according to Les Marsh, owner-operator of Marshalls Creek Insulation Co.

In many cases, the walls can be fully insulated with blown-type material. Ceilings can be insulated with either a batt, blanket or blown-type insulation. Floors, as a rule, are usually accessible for installation of insulation. Here a batt, blanket, or blown-type insulation can be readily installed.

Hagen cellulose insulation will pay for itself within a few years through savings — savings both in your cost of original equipment and day to day heating and cooling costs.

The same insulation working for you the year round — keeping your home warm in the winter and cool in the summer.

We install Urethane foam as in the photo to the left. Urethane-Foam is a complete family of urethane foam systems... each system designed to meet a specific need. This revolutionary new complex of systems is made even more amazing by the method of application. Two liquid components are brought together and sprayed from a specially designed gun. When this liquid mixture hits the surface, a chemical reaction takes place forming millions of tiny, enclosed cells. Urethane-Foam actually expands approximately 30 times its wet film thickness within 31 seconds. The result is a cellular plastic with more than twice the insulating value of conventional materials. Urethane-Foam is ideally suited for insulation of electrically heated buildings as well as for low-temperature refrigerated spaces. There is virtually no end to the list of applications where this versatile material out-performs all others.

For an estimate on your home contact Marshalls Creek Insulation Co., Les Marsh, owner and operator.

Democratic Party debt unpaid

By FRED L. ZIMMERMAN
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
WASHINGTON — The Democratic Party still owes $8,000 to the company that built those fences to keep hippies out of the Chicago convention four years ago.

But that's peanuts. The party also owes $1.5 million to the telephone company, $1 million to American Airlines and around $6.8 million more to close to 500 other creditors, ranging from hotels to printing companies.

And don't ask Robert Strauss, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, when the bills are going to be repaid — because he doesn't know.

"Political parties traditionally have been in debt," he says, "especially when they've lacked the glamor and majesty of the White House."

Not that the treasurer wishes to seem unconcerned. "A week never goes by," he declares, "that I don't meet with a creditor, keeping him quiet, explaining when I think he might get his money."

But trying to keep creditors quiet is nearly all the party is doing right now — or intends to do anytime soon — about its $9.3 million debt. As Strauss sees it, there's a much more important job ahead: Financing the defeat of Richard Nixon.

Strauss, a 53-year-old Dallas lawyer who tends to address people as "pal," is spending much of his time these days planning an 18-hour national telethon to raise money the weekend before the party's July convention.

In his dreams, he sees "a major entertainment and political spectacular," viewed by "as many lookers as the Super Bowl had." He says it will "tell the story of the American political process, the two-party system, and how it's everyone's responsibility to get a piece of the action." In other words: Contribute to the Democratic Party because it's broke.

Strauss says he hasn't any idea how much money the show will raise, but the men around him have told him the take could run as high as $35 million. "I know we're going to raise at least $8 or $10," he says, "because my family has told me they'll give that much."

The program, to be shown on ABC television July 8 and 9, will run nonstop from Saturday night to Sunday afternoon. Its planners don't know yet how they'll fill all that time.

They talk vaguely of a segment from Las Vegas, of tapes of old FDR speeches, of an appearance by Frank Sinatra — though Sinatra seems to be in the enemy camp at the moment.

They do have a vision, however, of people all over America picking up their telephones and calling in pledges — "because they believe," as Strauss puts it, "in the two-party system."

Arrangements are being made so that viewers wishing to pledge money can simply give the operator a credit-card number, whereupon they'll be billed automatically.

Although the TV sales push will mention the fact that the party is deeply in debt, it's likely that nearly all the money raised will go into the 1972 war chest rather than to old creditors from 1968.

"Look, pal," says Strauss, "we're going to be able to leave Miami Beach with our convention bills paid. But the Republicans are going to leave San Diego with $30 million to $60 million in the bank." (A spokesman for the Nixon campaign calls that estimate of the GOP fund "more than a little high," but he declines to offer a more accurate estimate.)

Even being able to pay the $2 million convention costs has taken some doing. About half the bill will be borne by the City of Miami Beach and various convention interests there. The remainder is being raised through the sale of ads in a convention program book the party is producing. Strauss says an assistant, George Bristol, already has sold $1 million worth of ads at $10,000 a page.

Convention financing has been a crucial matter partly because American Telephone and Telegraph Co. had threatened to deny phone service unless it got cash in advance. Strauss says AT&T will be paid $80,000 to $100,000 before the convention, which should cover the telephone bill.

An AT&T spokesman confirms that the convention will have a dial tone. As for the $1.5 million bill from 1968, he says AT&T hasn't lost hope. "Our people have been in frequent conferences with the committee. Unfortunately, however, the money isn't rolling in like we'd like to see it."

In his two years as treasurer, Strauss hasn't reduced the debt much at all. But he's proud that it hasn't grown.

King reburied

LISBON (UPI) — The body of the 19th Century King Dom Pedro IV of Portugal, who became Emperor of Brazil when he proclaimed the South American country's independence from Portugal in 1822, was sent by ship Monday to Brazil for reburial there. The body, which has lain in Portugal since Dom Pedro's death in 1834, was returned on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of Brazil's independence.

SHOPLIFTING

THE SILENT CRIME!

THUMBS DOWN!

This is one print you don't want to leave. It's the print of a 15 year old kid picked up for shoplifting. It's on a police record now — one that will follow him for the rest of his life!

Scare tactics you say? Hardly! Punishment for a first offense can be as much as a $2,000 fine and 5 years in jail, or more depending on the State you live in.

No matter what your state calls it — misdemeanor, petty larceny or felony — SHOP-LIFTING IS STEALING AND STEALING IS A CRIMINAL ACT and is punishable as such. YOUR AGE WILL NOT PROTECT YOU!
